

Allegato A/Annex A

UNINT – FACOLTA' DI ECONOMIA/UNINT-FACULTY OF ECONOMICS
INCARICHI DI INSEGNAMENTO OGGETTO DELLA MANIFESTAZIONE DI INTERESSE/ TEACHING POSITIONS OBJECT OF EXPRESSION OF INTEREST
A.A./A.Y. 2022-2023
Corso di laurea triennale in Economia internazionale e management digitale (L-18)
Titolo dell'Insegnamento/ Course title	S.S.D.	Ore di docenza / Teaching hours	Semestre / Semester *
International business law (in English)                      The course is meant to introduce students to the fundamentals of international business law. Upon completion of this course students are expected to have gained knowledge of the legal environment of European and international business, to identify and understand the different sources of law that may be relevant to business and international trade, and in particular legal rules on contracting, shipping, and business disputes. Moreover, students are expected to be able to understand the main international trade policies and the specific role of national, European and global economic institutions in the implementation of such policies. Required qualification: ideal candidates should have a PhD in Law and will be expected to provide evidence of significant teaching experience in law courses, taught in English, at undergraduate or post-graduate level. In any case, to be considered for the position candidates must be mother tongue English or be fluent in English (at least C1 level). Remuneration: remuneration will be determined on the basis of the selected candidate's profile.	IUS/14	40	II
Corso di laurea magistrale in Economia e management internazionale (LM-77)
Development economics, sustainability and cooperation (in English)                      The course will introduce students to the fundamentals of development economics and international cooperation. Upon completion of this course students are expected to be able to comprehend the classical theories of economic development and to be familiar with the most common approaches and methods aimed at analyzing, understanding and measuring inequality, development, poverty and population dynamics. Moreover, the course will enable students to use economic analysis to recognize the main obstacles for development of poor nations and to understand the role and the impact of cooperation policies employed by international organizations. Finally, students are also expected to understand and apply economic concepts associated to sustainability and to understand how the adoption of sustainable development practices and	SECS P/01	48	II

policies may contribute to the growth process and global poverty alleviation. Required qualification: ideal candidates should have a PhD in in the fields of Economics or International relations or related topics and will be expected to provide evidence of significant teaching experience in law courses, taught in English, at undergraduate or post-graduate level. In any case, to be considered for the position candidates must be mother tongue English or be fluent in English (at least C1 level). Remuneration: Remuneration will be determined on the basis of the selected candidate's profile.
International accounting (in English) The course is meant to introduce students to the practical notions and methods of business accounting. Upon completion of this course students are expected to be able to evaluate business performances through the analysis of annual accounting reports and to read and interpret a financial statement in an international perspective. Therefore, the main topics covered by the course will include the basic principles of accounting, the users of accounting information and accounting information system, the basics of financial accounting, the double entry system, the international accounting standards and the basics of management accounting. Required qualification: ideal candidates should have a PhD in Business administration or related topics and will be expected to provide evidence of significant teaching experience in accounting and/or business administration courses, taught in English, at undergraduate or post-graduate level. In any case, to be considered for the position candidates must be mother tongue English or be fluent in English (at least C1 level). Remuneration: remuneration will be determined on the basis of the selected candidate's profile.	SECS P/07	48	II
* Le lezioni del primo semestre si terranno dal 19 settembre al 20 dicembre 2022 mentre le lezioni del secondo semestre si terranno dal 27 febbraio al 27 maggio 2023/Courses scheduled in the first semester will be held between September 19th and December 20th, 2022 while courses scheduled in the second semester will be held between February 27th and May 27th, 2023.			